The Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America.

CONDUCTED BY J. C. STRIBLING.

Communications intended for this department should be addressed to J. C. Stribling, Pendleton, S. C.

Something Being Done.

Good for the Farmers' Union. After talking and deliberating for about a year the Farmers' Union of Anderson county has now begun to do things in earnest.

The Farmers' Union has now arranged with the Farmers' Warehouse Company to store cotton there at the rate of 15 cents per bale per month and draw 6 cents per pound on cotton at the rate of 7 per cent interest. Now there is absolutely no excuse for any farmer in reach of this warehouse to sell another bale of cotton for less than 11 cents.

The Farmers' Union had two objects in making this arrangement. One was to keep from overloading the market, and the other was to enable Union men to carry out their pledge not to sell for less than 11 cents.

We put all Union men on notice that they are not only building up an organization of farmers to control of numbers alone, but that you are at it, every day building a reputation—either good or bad—for the Union.

Four merchants, bankers and other creditors have stood by the nobly in your fight for profitable prices for cotton last season, and for this splendid support you should now be loyal to them and place your cotton in our warehouses and pay your bills promptly like men.

If you fail to act the gentleman with these your friends that have been prominent factors in enabling you to win the fight for profitable prices for your product, do be kind enough to the rest of the Union men not to mention the fact that you belong to the Farmers' Union until you can become a credit to both yourself and the Farmers' Union.

Remember, that the world respects every man according to the standard that each and every man makes for himself. And that every man makes his own reputation, and that no man has a right to blame others for not respecting him, when this same man does not respect himself. If you don't like the name "old boy seed," or "old hopper," clean yourself up a little when you go away from home. It matters not whether your shirt is patched or not, if it is not clean and clean and your head is brushed up nicely, and your hair is not dotted over with some of those little suspicious looking things that are suggestive of hay fever or something else. When you go to town hold your head up and step about just like you belonged to a class of men that owned the greater part of the earth, and that you sold in your hands, if well organized, the most important position and power of influence upon the face of earth, and no one will dare dispute your claim.

Who Controls Cotton Prices Today?

Farmers—cotton growers—what are you going to do about this? Look around at the cotton market today—September 15th—and see if the negroes and some trifling white men, mainly, are not in full control of the cotton market today. These short-sighted, ill-informed, distrustful, never-do-wells are simply tumbling over each other to get their cotton on the market before the price falls below ten cents. They never stop for a moment to think over the situation and find out that they are doing the one sure thing to run prices down by dumping cotton on the market faster than consumers can take care of it.

We have a sure remedy for this reckless, disastrous system of allowing the negro do-wells to absolutely control our cotton market by dumping cotton on the market for three months in the year, thus demoralizing the rest of the market to such an extent that it takes about six months of hard work of the best business men of the South to throttle the demon of disaster and bring the market back again to equitable prices. It takes time, judgment and deliberation to bring order out of chaos.

The land owners and the better class of renters, with the supply men, must take hold of this whole business of producing and marketing the cotton crop of the whole South. Business men must transact the business of cotton growing and marketing the crop, as the system now runs the very poorest, unbusinesslike class of our people—under the iron law of market in control of both the production and marketing of our great staple crop, cotton. We are at it today, placing our business into the hands of a class of people that are not business men, and the crudest idea of business principles in any sense of the word. These men, many of them, have absolutely nothing in the way of accumulation of capital, and they are not to be trusted with the business of producing and marketing the one crop, cotton. A man is to be trusted with the business of producing and marketing the one crop, cotton. A man is to be trusted with the business of producing and marketing the one crop, cotton. A man is to be trusted with the business of producing and marketing the one crop, cotton.

The law now is, and the whole business of producing and marketing of cotton must be placed into the hands of business men, and not into the hands of a class of people that are not business men. Dumping of cotton on the early stage of the season.

We were much impressed with the resolution of our county meeting as held, coming from Lebanon, where its members were to see all sorts to get all farmers to store their cotton when prices were not profitable, and where persons insisted on selling. Union members are to join in and buy all the cotton in their section and store it. Now, if one-half the cotton growers would join the Union in every State and carry out the Lebanon resolutions we would have a complete victory over all other cotton producers in the world. This Lebanon resolution is the first of the true cotton movement.

The first step in the cotton movement is to get the cotton growers to store their cotton in the hands of business men, and not into the hands of a class of people that are not business men. Dumping of cotton on the early stage of the season.

She is the lady who presented Bennettsville with her handsome graded school building. This increases Bennettsville's offer quite considerably.

M. B. Surges has resigned his position as dispenser at the West End dispensary in Greenville. Mr. Surges has always conducted a model place, and no complaint has ever been made concerning it. It is not known whether the position will be filled or the dispensary closed pending the dispensary election in Greenville County.

Hub Evans said at Columbia: "Ben Tillman and Frazer Lyon are anybody else better not say Hub Evans stole anything." He is quoted as replying with an oath to the suggestion from Tillman that the board resign. "I will not only not resign but I am going to run for re-election and I will be re-elected. I'll show these bullies a thing or two."

A Newberry special says: A third cotton mill for Newberry is the latest announcement along the line of this city's progress and spirit. A prominent citizen thoroughly alive to the interests of Newberry and its people, stated that the mill will be erected. It is probable that it will be built at Lenoir, a small town adjoining this city. Newberry at present boasts of two of the finest cotton mills in the State.

Last Thursday night Rolly Miller, a prosperous farmer living 12 miles from Arhington, Baker County, Ga., was shot and instantly killed by his son. He had been to a neighbor's house to get a dog and returning at a late hour and not wishing to disturb the sleeping family, did not let them know of his presence in the house. Miller went into the dining room to eat before retiring and the son, hearing some one in the dining room and thinking it was a burglar, slipped to the door and emptied the contents of a shot gun into the father. Almost instantly he discovered his mistake.

Murder and Lynching in Abbeville County.

Honea Path, Sept. 17.—About three miles below here in Abbeville County this afternoon just before sunset Sam and Jim Moore, two white men, got into a difficulty with Allen Pendleton and another negro. A fight followed in which Jim Moore was cut and killed by Pendleton.

Pendleton escaped and was captured by a crowd about half a mile below here. He was carried back to the scene of the killing and shot by a crowd of a dozen men.

Messrs. C. E. Harper, John F. Monroe and Magistrate Ashley arrived on the scene and tried to prevent the lynching. The negro was kept till 10:25 o'clock before he was lynched. Most of the parties engaged in the lynching were recognized by a considerable number who were present and not engaged in the affair. The crowd was dispersed and though the negroes are greatly excited no further trouble is feared.—Special to The State.

Donalds, September 17.—Last night about 3 o'clock, about two miles below Honea Path, in Abbeville county, Allen Pendleton, colored, stabbed Jas. Moore, a young white man, to death.

Jim Moore and his cousin, McDonald, a mere boy, were driving and locked wheels with Pendleton. This caused words and Pendleton sprang from his buggy and stabbed Moore, who had already alighted from his buggy, four times with a large knife. One thrust passed through the jugular vein and came out back of the neck, Moore dying instantly.

The negro then fled in the direction of Honea Path, but was hotly pursued and was caught about half way. He was carried back by the captors to the home of Bob Moore, the murdered boy's father, who was only a short distance from the scene of the killing.

A crowd soon collected and a lynching seemed inevitable. C. E. Harper and other cool heads advised a lawlessness. The party who had Moore in charge agreed to await the arrival of some citizens of Donalds, and be governed by their counsel. The Donalds men were wired for and went with haste to the scene, but were too late. The spirit of revenge had prevailed and Allen Pendleton had met his fate.

With a trace chain around his neck he had been chained to a small tree on the side of the public road, while his slayers faced him from the middle of the road. A volley of fifteen shots, with a few directly following, ended the career of Moore's murderer. About a dozen gunshot wounds were on the person of Pendleton. About half of them were evidently made by balls from Winchester's large caliber.

Dr. Payne testified at the inquest that Pendleton's skull was crushed and his shoulder and neck broken.

When last seen alive Pendleton was being led away by John Martin Ashby, the father and three brothers of young Moore, Sam Bigby and others. Many negroes were at the inquest, but were quiet. His relatives refused to come near or have anything to do with it, as did the other negroes. They absolutely refused to care for or bury the remains at any price, and the grave was dug in the thick woods near where the body lay.

Even a wagon to convey the body could not be obtained. A few young white men improvised a sled, put the body of Pendleton on it and dragged it to the grave in the woods, where a few planks were placed over the negro's body and it was covered up.

The sentiment of the people of Honea Path was against the lynching and it was severely condemned. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict that Pendleton came to his death at the hands of parties unknown to the jury.—Special to News and Courier.

Hawkins Says Two Men Tried to Murder Him.

Sheriff Gilreath had a long conference with J. D. Hawkins at his home at Brandon mills yesterday afternoon and the injured man, who was found unconscious near the railway track at Calhoun, told the sheriff that Henderson and Vaughn, the mill operatives being held in Columbia, traveled on a freight train with him to Calhoun. There, he said, the men assaulted him and after almost beating him to death dragged his body across the track with the idea that the next train coming along would finish their fiendish work. He managed to crawl off the track, however, and thus saved his life.

Hawkins was brought back from Calhoun Friday afternoon and yesterday he had sufficiently recovered his strength to tell the sheriff a well connected story of the affair. It remains to be seen whether the men are telling the truth or not. Relatives of the men say that the story is a myth, and circumstances will be called in when the case gets into the courts to lead the jurors to a proper verdict.

In view of what Hawkins says the crime is properly for Pickens county, and the authorities here will soon take steps to have the men in Columbia placed in the keeping of Sheriff Jennings of Pickens.—Greenville News, 17th inst.
